Bio:

My Collington home is my 9th home. I have relocated to several states working as a sales manager for a large corporation for over 30 years. I managed 26 sales reps responsible for a $40 million dollar sales region. I have been very effective driving change whether it be new product development or marketing programs. My philosophy is “participate in change or be a victim of it.” I completed my formal education at an executive management program at the University of Cincinnati. I now own Home Integrity Home Inspections, a residential home inspection business. My wife Mary and I have five children, three of whom live locally. I am very active and always need a “project.” I enjoy landscape gardening, golfing, and the occasional run. My wife and I enjoy the ocean, a glass of wine, and checking out new charming towns.

Collington is literally a small town of 4,000 people with no full-time city manager. Tommy Owens has his hands full, working full time and managing this HOA. Our first year out of the box, this HOA board has experienced some bumps and bruises along their learning curve, this is understandable. Having lived in various states and been active in a number of HOAs. I look forward to helping him and the talented people he is surrounding himself with to develop a cohesive group working with residents and various vendors to turn this HOA into a well-oiled machine. The Collington common grounds have a profound effect on the resale of our homes. We have a lot of competition with all the new sub-divisions surrounding us. My hobby lends itself strongly to helping the Grounds Chairman to effectively manage the community's grounds and bring them to a new level.

Reason(s) for serving on the Board:

I feel being a part of our HOA is an important job and one I would take very seriously. We need engaged, passionate people to step up and take the initiative to make Collington an all-inclusive, vibrant community. I'm committed to doing that and I know my strengths and skill level would be a valuable asset to the Collington HOA Board.
